L&L- Characters and differences

November 4th, 2019

Ralph as a character is an interesting combination of a leader but a bystander in some way but that is at the end. I will give evidence for how he is a Risk taker, that is a part of what and who he is in the book Lord of the Flies. He as a person multiple times has allowed others to speak as a whole group. Example he has found and created the Conch shell into a figure in the novel. He as a person in this book shows he is similar as close to a protagonist a hero. He also in the novel shows bravery in his own way and also does help as being an inquirer.

In the book a person who doesn't know his own identity is Thomas, a leader and a person who takes risks. Specifically against the protagonist or the company and organization that is trying to obtain them for a cure to an epidemic. WICKED is the name of that organization. Thomas is very bright and kind to his peers. He as a person helps out other in kindness, an example is in chapter 4 to five when they were attacked to the brim with soldiers getting to abducts and harness the cure for the Flare disease. Thomas also in past novels had given up his own opportunities to be free from the government or WICKED for his own peers and girlfriend. Also other times when he has been kind to his peers in the past he has been betolved by the ones he loved for his own sacrifices. In his own way he is a leader and caring. He is a leader through his mental and physical stability, by being the first for change in the first book to finally get out of the maze and become a person of choice for others and himself.

A sidekick and a partner in crime with Ralph. Piggy has succeeded in a lot of things, but not his own voice. Piggy in an example has fought out hard solutions, such as the Conch and other hard obstacles in the novel. Piggy has helped other people by giving his knowledge example already said is the Conch, on page 21 he found it and Ralph became a leader off that help from Piggy. Piggy also in the novel created a way of the future, an example is when he came out of the triangle or stopped having a conversation as a whole with the group. During chapter 5-7 is the transfiguration of his silence for the rest of the novel.

Another character from maze runner is a girl that I have already talked about Teresa, a character captured and exploited in the novel for about the whole gosh darn time. She as a character is a protagonist and has an interesting pattern throughout the book because she became the enemy in the second of the series. Between then she is their but practically gets herself into trouble most while and is a side in the partner or sidekick. An example is for emotional support and has in the past has become a turning point in the novel. The reason is because she has become an asset to the foe behind as a cover up but did it for no cause.

To conclude this project and the information with it, the main takeaway from this is specifically how a character can form or change over time or with the people around you.
